According to an old adage, “ there are no coincidences. ” It is thus significant that the opening pages of Envisioning Freedom: Cinema and the Building of Modern Black Life begin with a vignette about the 1895 earthquake in New Madrid, Missouri. Caddoo paints a picture of “ violent undulations ” from the earth ’ s very core that she posits as akin to “ the tectonic shifts occurring along the fault lines of the nation ’ s racial order that would disperse hundreds of thousands of people ...
