Zend Framework includes several action helpers by default: `AutoComplete` for automating responses for AJAX autocompletion; `ContextSwitch` and `AjaxContext` for serving alternate response formats for your actions; a `FlashMessenger` for handling session flash messages; `Json` for encoding and sending JSON responses; a `Redirector`, to provide different implementations for redirecting to internal and external pages from your application; and a `ViewRenderer` to automate the process of setting up the view ...

~~Manual - Documentation - Zend Framework~~

The Zend Framework is aimed at developers who do not want to have to dig through all the source code to get their job done and so the Zend Framework puts documentation on an equal footing with the code. This means that the core team will not allow new code into the framework unless it has accompanying documentation.
